

ANOTHER YEAR OF WAR, KAISER'S PREDICTION

Quoted as Saying "You Will Probably See Roses Blooming Again in Enemy's Country."

THE HAGUE, July 30.—The Germans will still be fighting on foreign soil a year from now, according to a prediction by Kaiser Wilhelm, as reported by the Nieuwe Courant. A letter from a German officer published today contained the following:

"The Kaiser lately visited our corps at dinner. We sang the soldier song, 'We Will Meet Again At Home.' Thereupon the Kaiser rose and said:

"Dear comrades, you must not think this will be soon. You probably will see once more the roses blooming in the enemy's country."

BRITISH HOME OFFICE EXPELS WOMAN PASTOR

Rev. Gertrude von Peitzold, Resident of England Eighteen Years, Is Ordered to Leave Country.

LONDON, July 30.—Rev. Gertrude von Peitzold, the woman pastor of a Unitarian church in Birmingham, and who is known in the United States, was expelled from England today by order of the British Home Office. She had lived here eighteen years.

Some years ago the woman applied for naturalization but went to America where she remained two years and the application lapsed. When her application was renewed at the beginning of the war, it was rejected by the Home Office.

MOVIE MAN TO LET $35,000,000 CONTRACT

Emil Pathé, of the Pathé Freres moving picture concern, and Russell Hunting, leading director of the company, were passengers on the Chicago of the French Line, arriving here today.

"Mr. Pathé is going to take a place in Jersey City and live there for a time," Mr. Hunting said. "Before we return to France we shall leave a $35,000,000 contract in this country."

Mr. Hunting refused to go into any particulars in regard to the big contract, except to say that he had to do with the moving picture business of Pathé Freres.

Says No One Need Remain Thin Now

Good Advice For Thin, Underdeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, find that the results are not as good as they had hoped for. The cause is not lack of food, but lack of the right kind of food. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow faster. This force is called Sargol. It is a natural product of the body and is used by the body to build up the tissues. It is a powerful stimulant and is used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitality, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.—Adv.

Business Bargains

The "Business Opportunity" advertisements of the Daily and Sunday World are of great value and importance to the business man and to those who contemplate buying a business. Their value lies in the fact that there is a wide variety of opportunities which cover every phase of commercial life. Then again, these ads. are subject to a careful censorship, and the World does not knowingly publish a misleading advertisement. Readers have confidence in World ads. Hence their value.

During the year 1914 The World printed MORE "Business Opportunity" advertisements than ALL the SIX other morning newspapers ADDED TOGETHER. The following table shows the number:

Original Home Dressmaking Designs By The Evening World's Fashion Expert

Dame Fashion Finds New Use for Hair Cloth, Not to Mortify the Flesh, but to Comfort It—It Aids in Fashioning the Billowy Wide Skirts Decried by the Modistes.

Copyright, 1915, by The Press Publishing Co., The New York Evening World.

It is the song of the skirt which is heard above all others this summer. It billows (or might we say "bellows") forth in such voluminous folds and many ruffles that it is decidedly the most pretentious part of the 1915 summer frock.

When skirts first began to grow wider women began to look anxious and to dream of the embarrassments of crinolines. Indeed, did not a New York shop show the crinoline petticoat to scare them still further? This is a group of four or five little ruffles suspended from the waist by ribbon straps and held out by circles of wire hidden by the furbelows. The latest idea, however, in skirt widening applies not to the hem, but to the hips, and is accomplished by a skillful placing of a bit of haircloth. This new use of haircloth is very innocent, light and frivolous in comparison with the old time use of the same material. The new name is crin-braid, and it is open in weave, transparent and very flexible. It has been used to stiffen tulle frills, as collar supports and as transparent hat brims, but its latest use is to hold a thin skirt slightly out from the hips, so that the material swings freely from the waist when the wearer is in motion.

With these full skirts it is necessary to wear two petticoats, especially after afternoon and evening frocks, which cover a large space of ground in their circumference just now, measuring anywhere from three yards to six or seven. Morning dresses are still quite conservative, measuring a little over two yards. Taffeta and soft silk street dresses are apt to have straight gathered skirts, trimmed horizontally with bands, shaped tucks or narrow frills in rows. These straight lines are for utility, but flaring flouncing ones are for friv.

Evening frocks of tulle, with moderately full underskirts of silk or satin, rival the flounces which for afternoon may be said to reign supreme. Taffeta for evening is often used just for a snug bodice to top a cloud of pale colored tulle, or a skirt of tulle flares or puffs crisply at the ankles over a dainty lace underskirt. To wear with the short skirted dancing frocks, a pair of gold or silver slippers will be found a sensible investment. They are, however, to be sure; but they go well with the pale colors that are fashionable for evening, and they are a good deal more economical than slippers and stockings to match each gown.

DESCRIPTION OF THE FROCK.

The charming evening frock I am showing is capable of considerable variation in the way of materials. At the right is suggested a combination of tulle, lace and taffeta, with a garland of roses to add gaiety. The skirt, in adopting so frivolous and transparent a material as lace, modestly drapes it with an underskirt of lavender tulle, and then prudently restrains its fulness by three cordings. These, however, confer a trimming quality, being of lavender taffeta to match the bodice, but they are not considered necessary from the knees down, so that the overskirt is allowed to billow in graceful folds. A bit of the lace underskirt is visible at the bottom, where the taffeta binding of the overskirt contrasts charmingly. The more appreciative, however, is this contrast when examined in the bodice, where a lace yoke, outlined across the front with roses, is set into a snug taffeta lower portion.

Sleeves of lavender tulle are confined into puffs with bands of the lace, which give a distinctly new effect especially attractive to complete this frock with the puffing of the skirt. A cluster of roses dropped on the front edge of the overskirt is an individual note.

With such a very low yoke, which should be of transparent material to match the sleeves, the bodice of this design would be quite justified in assuming velvet to complete it.

Such an effect I have pictured at the left, where a large velvet bow formed by ends attached at the side seams is seen to trim the back of the bodice and skirt alike. Point d'esprit or embroidered net would be pretty with any color velvet bodice, the same being used for cordings on the skirt. A soft taffeta or chiffon cloth underskirt sparkling with beaded banding on its edge, while a glimmer of beads also shows off effectively next the velvet of the bodice and as bands for the sleeves.

"Please, sir, he's wedding the garden," replied a small voice. "To be sure," said Squeers, by no means disconcerted. "So he is. B-o-t, b-o-t, t-i-n, bottin, n-e-y, ney, bottinney, noun substitue, a knowledge of plants. When he has learned that bottinney means a knowledge of plants he goes and knows 'em. That's our system, Nickleby. What do you think of it?"

"It's a very useful one, at any rate," answered Nicholas.

It was, perhaps, the above passage from "Nicholas Nickleby" that suggested a clever plan to the proprietor of a certain business college.

"Here I have scores of pupils learning to operate the typewriter," he reflected. "They must do a certain amount of practising in order to perfect themselves. Instead of wasting all that effort, why not profit by it?"

He engaged a solicitor to canvass neighboring offices for typewriting work. Concerning mailing thousands of circular letters realized the superiority of original letters over those reproduced by mechanical methods. As the labor involved cost the pedagogues nothing, he was enabled to quote a very low figure. Now his advanced classes provide him with a handsome additional income from this source.

Efficiency in the Receiving Department.

"When I first assumed the management of our receiving department," said an executive connected with a large plant, "I found a deplorable lack of system. Errors in weights and quantities often passed unnoticed, and on several occasions bills were paid twice for the same shipment. Our present system obviates all danger of mistakes.

"When the shipments arrive we issue a letter so stating, reproduced in triplicate, and send a copy to the department for which the goods are destined. Another copy goes to the auditor of receipts. Upon receipt of the goods the department responsible for them checks them in, pins our letter of advice to the checking list and sends them to the auditor of receipts.

Here they are compared with the customer's invoice and the duplicate of our letter of advice. Any differences between the customer's invoice and our own records are here adjusted. The invoices are extended and footed. Then the auditor O. K.'s them for payment. After entry in the journal they pass to the auditor of disbursements. As all the documents involved, original checking list, letter of advice and its duplicate and report of receipts are pinned together and upon payment of bill filed, danger of double payments is eliminated. A duplicate bill cannot go through again without having all these papers attached. And as they are safely filed such an occurrence would be a physical impossibility.

Don't Use Soap On Your Hair

When you wash your hair, don't use soap. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mul-sified coconut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and heats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Adv.
